FIND BODY OF MURDER VICTIM

Los Angeles Capitalist Buried Under Three Tons of Earth

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 23.—(City and county officers were today in the pursuit of clues which they hoped would lead them to a solution of the murder mystery developed today with the discovery of the body of Jacob Charles Denton, Los Angeles capitalist, buried under three tons of earth in an underground tunnel in the cellar of his former home in the fashionable Wilshire residential district of this city. Quicklime had been placed about the body and indications were he had been shot.

Letters found in a small apartment he had reserved for his own use, while leading the remainder of the residence, drew the attention of the police to three women, whose names were not made public, pending their location and questioning. A private detective who found the body also declared he had evidence that Denton had been shot in a rooming house shortly before his disappearance, August 13, last.

According to the officers, the three women for whom search was begun were intimate friends of the dead man and visited him frequently. And one of the three, it was believed, had grown to look upon Denton as a possible suitor.

A Bible in the room showed that Denton, who was 45 years old, had been married twice. His first wife, divorced, is now believed to be living in Missouri. His second wife, it is not known. His second wife, whom he married in 1909, was a Miss Delle Mae Winters. She and the only child, a son, died after his birth.

It was through a letter from the daughter, received today by a Los Angeles attorney, that a private detective was employed to make a search for the body. The girl, who she had not received a letter from for several weeks.

The attorney and the detective went to the Denton residence and were informed by the tenants that the body had been buried in the cellar.

A search of the house followed. The detective noticed a space of earth upon the cellar floor and marked the disfigurement between the doorway of the cellar and the doorway of the partition, which it developed, had been constructed about the crude stage.

He broke through the walls of the partition, earth tumbled out, revealing the body of the body, wrapped in a container, and partly covered with quicklime.

Identification was made through a ring Denton always wore—a gift from his dead mother—and through a belt buckle, also a gift.

The room, reserved by Denton for his own use, in addition to the terrace and the Bible, were found a number of cards he had used in connection with his business as a mining prospector, a revolver and bloodstains.

This was fully indicated by the presence of the cartridges made for a revolver of another calibre.

From this, officers deduced, one shot had been fired from the revolver. Denton's assailant, who, unable to obtain another cartridge of the proper calibre, had inserted another, to throw any possible investigators off the trail.

The officers also declared efforts apparently had been made to eradicate the bloodstains with soap and water.

Denton dropped from sight August 19, when he rented the property where his body was found. The woman with whom he was believed to have been the most intimate, disappeared about the same time, officers said. They indicated they were continuing their efforts first on the attempt to find her.

Shortly before his death, Denton prepared a will.

Besides his daughter and divorced wife, he is survived by a brother at Berkeley, Calif., and two nephews in Los Angeles.

URGES HIGHER RATE INDUSTRIAL DEATHS

Declares Present Precautions Not Sufficient For Protection

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 23.—Deaths from industrial accidents should cost employers in California about $7000 apiece to put down the present loss of life, as the present compensation charge of $2400, resulting in "too many people being killed," Commissioner A. J. Pillsbury of the California Industrial Accident Commission told the International Association of Industrial Accident Boards and commissions convention here today.

If it "cost more to kill a man," Mr. Pillsbury said, there would be fewer stages falling in the shipyards, fewer trainmen injured and less "blaming the victim" under present conditions, according to Mr. Pillsbury, many industries are speeded up so much that safety to workmen is impossible.

The loss to the state of an industrialized country, he said, is $22 in being deprived of his productive capacity.

Officers were to be elected tonight and a banquet held, following and the convention adjourned tomorrow to visit San Francisco tomorrow.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—Prohibition enforcement officials, the New York branch of the anti-Saloon League and its superintendent, William H. Anderson, shared alike a verbal attack made today by Hiram C. Cole, New York congressman, at a public hearing in a speech before the international congress against alcoholism.

Mr. Cole explained that a preface to this speech that when he reached the convention hall he was informed by Chairman Phelan that he would not be permitted to deal with personalities. He leveled a bitter attack on the mass of enforcement officials, including Anderson, who were "back-passing" and had not forced the candidates of either the anti-Saloon League or the prohibitionists to a referendum and enforcement of the prohibition laws.

He said the prohibition enforcement officials don't take hold of this situation quickly. Mr. Cole continued, "I don't see a worse scandal than this anti-alcohol fight, and that there was in the old whisky ring 25 years ago. I'm tired of going after the poor little devil. I want the enforcement laws to be enforced. But counts—even among their own members—in the very heart of the government."

CATHOLICS TO ERECT $5,000,000 SHRINE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—The foundation stone of the new $5,000,000 shrine of the Immaculate Conception, which is being erected on the Catholic University grounds here and which is to be dedicated to the memory of the soldiers and sailors who lost their lives in the world war, was laid today by Cardinal Gibbons of Baltimore, assisted by Cardinal O'Connor of Boston.

Attending the ceremony were many of the archbishops of the Catholic church in the United States, hundreds of priests, a multitude of military and naval officers, and prominent laymen, as well as government officials and the diplomatic representatives of foreign nations.

Bishop Shehan, rector of the Catholic University, and Cardinal Gibbons, who presided at the ceremony, delivered addresses.

Bishop Shehan announced that Pope Benedict XV had sent the papal benediction to all those participating in the service today, and that the Pope was making a gift of the first of its kind ever to come to America, of a full life-size statue of the Virgin Mary, which will be placed when the shrine is completed.

The home defense fleet will consist of the cruiser Baltimore, flagship of Rear Admiral Spencer Wood, the light cruiser Vestal and four destroyers, Cuyamaca and Kearsarge, which are to be stationed in the maneuvers as battleships; the mine force, submarine force and the air force.

The most spectacular part of the battle will occur in the event that the airships and seaplanes that the fleet is making a gift of to the big guns of the San Diego fortifications. If this happens, the location of the battleships and destroyers will be flashed by radio to the squadron of torpedo planes, which will then launch an aerial attack on Admiral Rodman's force.

It is expected that the maneuvers will last about two days.

SAMUEL GOES EAST OF JORDAN

Extends Palestine Control Beyond the Dead Sea

JERUSALEM, Aug. 23.—(By Mail.)—British administration has been extended to a considerable part of the Jordanian territory, of which Es Salt, a town of about 1,200 inhabitants, situated some twenty miles east of the Dead Sea, is the chief center.

Sir Herbert Samuel, British high commissioner for Palestine, has just returned from a journey to the new territory, where he was accompanied by British officials and representatives of the Jewish community. The high commissioner's assurance that Great Britain did not propose to bring the country within the present system of administration of Palestine, but would establish a separate administration for the Jordanian territory, has been received with enthusiasm by the people.

Sir Herbert returned through Jericho to Amman, where he was met by Maj. J. H. D. Smith, commander of the Jordanian forces, and the sons of Sir Herbert, who are the most influential of the British officials in the Jordanian territory. The British high commissioner's assurance that Great Britain did not propose to bring the country within the present system of administration of Palestine, but would establish a separate administration for the Jordanian territory, has been received with enthusiasm by the people.

The Arabs extended a cordial welcome to the British high commissioner, whom they entertained lavishly in Amman. Sir Herbert explained to the Arabs that since the French had fully established their influence in Damascus, it would be necessary to separate the Arab's district from the Jordanian administration. Great Britain, he said, would help them to organize defense against attack from outside. Sir Herbert developed a program of road building, the building of schools and the provision of medical aid.

There would be, he promised, complete freedom of trade with Palestine, and the people would be supplied with petroleum, sugar and other commodities on the same footing as the people of Palestine. Moreover, the British high commissioner said, he would be glad to assist commerce and agricultural development, and to open up the Jordanian territory to the high commissioner, as many as possible of the future administrators of the new territory would be drawn from the people of the Jordanian territory. He also gave assurance that it was not contemplated to establish any system of compulsory military service, nor to introduce disarmament.

An amnesty was readily granted to a prominent Arab leader, who had been charged with instigating the Arab riots in Jerusalem. Many Arabs affixed their seals to the official document expressing a desire for British rule.

QUARANTINE LAW PRESTILENCE

An extremely important question of public right is about to be settled by a minor lawsuit in Berkeley. There was an epidemic of diphtheria in the Berkeley High School, which was controlled as well as possible by rigid quarantine and other public health measures. Students suffering with or exposed to the disease were naturally excluded from school, and under the quarantine regulations they were not permitted to return until they have ceased to be a menace to others. Unfortunately, in diphtheria, the period of danger in others is not definitely measured by the state of the patient's own health. In some cases the contagion ceases when the disease ceases, while in others it continues for a variable period thereafter. Some persons with a high personal immunity may even harbor the contagion and spread it to others without having been sick at all themselves. It is therefore impossible to determine by the stage of the patient's own recovery when he has reached the stage when it is safe to lift the quarantine and allow him to mingle with others. The only test is to touch his throat with a swab of clean cotton and test in a laboratory the germs found there. If among them is the Klebsiella bacillus, and if a guinea pig exposed to this bacillus dies of the diphtheria, obviously the person from whose throat that germ came is not yet safe to be released from quarantine. The test of course can do no possible harm to the quarantined person, since it is a mere light touching of the throat with a piece of clean cotton, but naturally it should not be inflicted by violence. The Berkeley health authorities have merely refused to lift the quarantine except on a certificate that the throat has been tested and found safe. Seven children, acting, they said, under orders of their parents (and the parents of course actuated thereby by the Public School Protective League) who had not been tested and are still under quarantine, insisted on going to school and refused to leave when ordered. So they were formally arrested for violation of quarantine, and a test case will determine whether the quarantine laws of California, in time of public epidemic, can be enforced.

It is quite possible that no one of these seven children would be a danger to others if returned to school. The number of those who are dangerous, after a reasonable period, is less than one in seven, so there is no certainty that so small a number would include any dangerous carrier. But if the principle is recognized that the spreading of pestilence is a personal privilege, above the law and beyond the control of government, then there can be no such thing as the protection of the public health in California. On matters under human control, provision can be made for the dissenting minority. We do not compel conscientious objectors to fight, and we do not enforce prohibition on the use of wine in religious observance. We exempt churches and certain schools from taxation, and we allow our soldiers to peddle without a license. We allow E. W. W.'s to make speeches which the rest of us think foolish. All these things we can do, because they are for us to decide. But we can not decide that a diphtheria germ in the mouth of a Republican is safe but in the mouth of a Democrat is dangerous. The germ decides that for itself, and its rule is that it is no respecter of opinions, and that its penalty for honest error is death. We may respect the right of the honest objector to impose that penalty on himself, but we can not leave it to his opinion whether he shall impose it on others.

There is an organized political body in California, determined to establish it as a legal principle that public health regulations can not be enforced on those who do not believe in them. This small case in Berkeley may become the test of that principle. And that issue is nothing less than the question whether California can or can not be made a safe place in live in, whether the resources of civilized knowledge can or can not be made available for the protection of the people. On this question there can be no compromise. Public health is or is not a religious question. The right of dissent is or is not the same in the two. The right to enforce quarantine laws is or is not analogous to the right to enforce heresy laws. As a matter of jurisprudence, we can decide this question either way. But we can not alter the fact that deciding it one way will spread pestilence and deciding it the other way will safeguard the public health. The germs of disease will not compromise this question and therefore we dare not.

LEAGUE ALL RIGHT IF WE ARE

The only really serious objection to America joining the League of Nations is a criticism rather of the constitution of the United States than of the covenant of the League. Even without reservations, our membership in the League would be safe against the dangers that have been depicted, by reason of the requirement of unanimous consent for every action that could seriously concern us. Since we could not be bound without our consent, we need have no fear of being obligated to anything unwelcome. The only flaw in this argument is the possibility that we might have a representative who did not represent us, and who might bind us against our will. President Wilson, for instance, did go to Paris to represent America, after both the people and the Senate had refused him a vote of confidence, and he negotiated the treaty for the League of Nations after a sufficient number of Senators to defeat it had notified him that they would not ratify it. However correct or incorrect the President may have been in thinking he represented the real sentiments of the American people, he at least misrepresented the only expression of those sentiments which our governmental machinery made possible. And, since the covenant makes no provision for the manner of the appointment of our representative, it is at least conceivable that a President bent on war might appoint a delegate who would commit us to war, even against the known will of the people and the expressed will of Congress. So runs the argument.

So far as the argument is true, it merely points out an imperfection of our own form of government. If the things depicted could happen, they could only happen because we can have a President who misrepresents the people, and he can appoint persons to act for the nation without the consent of Congress and contrary to the will of the people. This could not happen in any other of the principal powers in control of the League. It could scarcely happen in any of the minor ones. Everywhere else the government is responsible to parliament and parliament to the people. No representative of the nation can misrepresent the nation and still continue its representative. Only in America, and in such Spanish-American states as have too slavishly copied our model, is such a thing possible. And if it is possible in our representation in the League of Nations, the fault is not in the League, but in ourselves.

Of course the remedy is the passage of a law (and a reservation to the treaty if necessary) providing for our government, in this respect, the responsibility which we ought to have in all other respects also. Let it be provided that no American representative to the League Council shall be appointed without the consent of the Senate, nor shall vote to commit the United States to war without the express authorization of Congress. Then we shall be safe, so far as the League is concerned. And a little self-examination, while safeguarding ourselves in this respect, may prepare us to realize that we need a more responsible government in all other respects also, for domestic as well as foreign affairs.

A TRIFLE MIXED

A Caruthers man charges several boys who he had ordered off his ranch with shooting him. Physicians, on examination, find no gunshot wound, but he still insists that he was shot, and demands the arrest of the boys.

On the legal aspect of the case the police court will pass, and we have no disposition to interfere. What we are interested in is its metaphysical aspects. For here is the adverse of an important doctrine. We are familiar with the contention that when a man seems to have been shot by what seems to be a gun, and when physicians report that they find what seems to be a wound and extract from it what seems to be a bullet, there is in truth no injury and no wound; for, since injury is metaphysically incompatible with truth, it follows that it is practically inconsistent with truth. Not being true, it can not be true. Or, if true, it is only true on the plane of truth, and therefore can not be true to those who have risen to the plane of truth. The capitalists make all the difference. It is an upper-case philosophy.

Now, if this argument demonstrates the non-existence of a wound which is there, why may not its converse demonstrate the existence of a wound which is not there? It is all a matter of mental impression, and this complaint certainly has the mental impression that he is shot. Against this impression is nothing except the mere fact that there is no wound there, and even this fact is established only by the testimony of physicians, who certify that they find nothing. What has that to do with the case? Mere physicians, especially allopathic physicians, know nothing of the entities of metaphysics. They are creatures of the senses, wedded to seeing, hearing and feeling. But truth is thought. Therefore truth is thought. And while a wound can not be thought, this one is evidently thought for a man thinks it. Therefore, if not truth, it is at least truth. C. E. D.

Wherefore we suppose it follows that while there is no such thing as Man being shot, this man was shot. And while a sublimated Police Court ought not to put the Boys in Jail (there being no such place), judge Briggs at least ought to put the boys in jail. Or is this what follows? We confess we are getting a trifle mixed. We know something of words as tools of thought, but we are a bit awkward in using letters for that purpose.

MORE THAN PREACHING NEEDED

Of all the befuddlement over the League of Nations, the most amusing is Senator Harding's suggestion that the nations of the world should get out of the present league, because they are in it selfishly, and should then join themselves into a new one unselfishly. Obviously, that would cure everything. We do not trust the motives of those who would be our associates if we went into the present league. But if they went into a new association, with only ideal and unselfish motives, and if we went in with the same motives, then, if we all worked unselfishly for a common ideal, we could all trust each other. Quite so!

We assume that Senator Harding does not mean anything quite so foolish. He merely says it without knowing what he means. But if he is vaguely groping toward the thought that the world needs more idealism, why is he opposing President Wilson or his league? Certainly there could have been no truer idealism than President Wilson preached to the world, in formulating the league covenant in Europe and in seeking to get it accepted here. The idealism was perfect. The only criticism is on the failure to get it realized in practice. And until Senator Harding can suggest some more practical way of getting his idealism realized than merely preaching it, he has got nowhere. Certainly he is no better preacher than President Wilson, nor half so good. But it needs most of all is American example. And Senator Harding seems to be the last to be willing to lead in offering that.

HOW SUFFRAGE WAS RATIFIED

Twa Mouthfu's o' Naething

Dear-o-dear-o-dear!
Whit' arloads o' lassies
Can troopin' down
And skipkin' out
On the Fresno street
At a couple o' minutes
After twelve o'clock
Each workin' day
Frae somewhere inside
The Raisin-Peach buildin'
It fetches the mind
The bairnin'
O' a great danc'
First there'll cum
A couple o' lassies
Soakin' along
And then three or four
Will come in their wake
And then a half dozen
Will squeeze out
Through the doors
And then they cum
Like a tidal wave—
A deep wide stream
O' sonny lassies
Edgin' their tight way
Through narrow dures
And skipkin' out
Till a' the sidewalk
Is covered at them
And the broad highway
Canna haud them.
Some o' them there be
Wi' een o' blue
And some wi' brown—
And some as gray
As a winter sky
And some again
Luk out yon ye
Wi' een the color
O' the deep, salt black
O' moonless summer night.
And they wear crowns

O' red and black, and brown
And golden hue
Curled high or low
Or waved or plain
The cheeks o' them
Are like the cheeks
That ilka ladde
Laves (as see
On ilka lassie
And the gear they wear
Is frill-like
And bonny the e'e
And best o' a
The best things
That they wear
Are pleasant smiles
A fu' o' freenliness
Wi' soot o' sparkles
Glintin' in them
And merry twinkles
Dartin' to and frae
O' the face that buildin'
At the hour o' noon
Cum swarmin' samples
O' the gudey product
O' this sunny valley
O' the San Joaquin
Peaches we raise
In myriad orchards
And wrinkled raisins
And prune and apricot
And load load we make
O' a jigs fruit perfection
But somewhere
In the juir auld head
I'm thinkin' noo
That it may be
That some soon day
We'll find a better thing
The boast about
In the happy lassies
That grow amang us.

AFRICAN MEDICINE MAN HAS IDOL TO GUARD HIS HOME

Superstitions are superstitions, but here is a new one. A witch doctor, or medicine man of the Ikofo Indian tribe in South Africa, would not think of going away to another village before placing the above rudely constructed idol in front of the doorway. He declares the idol, which is constructed of wood and straw, protects his home from intruders and beasts of the forest.

PHELAN FAVORS CITRUS TARIFF

Editor, Republican:—Political campaign literature, including editorials in party newspapers and political platform talks, during presidential campaigns are usually unreliable and untruthful, and the campaign now on seems to be no exception. In the case of the most brazen campaign literature appeared in a recent issue of the San Francisco Chronicle, and in the effect that Senator Phelan is opposed to a tariff on citrus fruit. This is being circulated, of course, in the hope that it may catch some votes among those who are interested in the citrus fruit industry of California. Now what is the truth in this matter of the tariff on citrus fruit? The tariff law of 1903, passed by a Republican congress and signed by President Taft, imposed a tariff of one cent per pound on oranges, lemons and other citrus fruits. The tariff law of 1913, known as the Underwood tariff, passed by a Democratic congress and signed by President Wilson, imposed a tariff of one and a half cents per pound on oranges, lemons and other citrus fruits. The law of 1913, known as the Underwood law, took effect March 1, 1914. The Republican party has had a good working majority in both houses of congress for nearly two years, and no move has been made to change this law, and it is still in effect. During the time this law has been in effect, the citrus fruit industry has been wonderfully prosperous.

More Truth Than Poetry By James J. Montague

NO PEP

Far be it from us, who by nature are quiet
And little addicted to struggle or strife,
To pose as a flaming apostle of riot
Or advocate cows in political life.
But somehow, with haunting regret we remember
When candidates were not so flabby of spine,
But went on the stump from July till November
Arraigning opponents as liars and swine.

With gentle remonstrance no speaker would dally.
They had fresh inventives to spring every night.
Vast crowds would attend a political rally
Because they were sure it would end in a fight.
A solon, accused of an improper action,
Did not say the charge put a strain on belief.
But much to his own and his friends' satisfaction,
He labelled his rival a crook and a thief.

The issues were left for the papers to settle.
The candidates held them in utter disdain.
And after the mode of the pot and the battle
They blackened each other throughout the campaign.
They listed all crimes that were ever committed
And swore their opponents had done the whole lot.
They vowed that the job for which best they were fitted
We mean the opponents was stopping hot shot.

We manage campaigns in a kinder fashion:
Our candidates argue with phrases polite.
They never would stoop to the language of passion,
And seldom do meetings break up in a fight.
They talk to the crowd as they would to a jury:
They never grow violent, Heaven forbid!
Or lash themselves into a froth of fury
Yet somehow or other we wish that they did!

AND THEY DON'T NEED IT.

The speed-up campaign doesn't appear to arouse anybody but drivers of automobiles.

WE NEVER LEARN.

Ship yards are closing all over the country. We are a good deal like Noah. We only build ships when we are terribly scared.

IT'S GETTING WEARISOME.

Auto truth is overdoing it. One of his home runs is only worth a two-line item on the sporting page now.

Indict Sacramento Officials, Conspiracy

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 23.—Indictments charging conspiracy against former State Senator William S. Scott and four building and leasing contractors, with violating the California anti-trust law, and conspiring to cheat and defraud in relation to certain building contracts were returned to the superior court today after having been voted last Monday.

According to evidence before the grand jury, the accused secured control of the lowest bid on public and private contracts before they were submitted and placed an arbitrary additional sum on them, which they divided among themselves when payment was made on the contracts. They denied all charges made.

Find Hidu Guilty Murder at Delta

MARTINEZ, Cal., Sept. 23.—Mather Smith, a Hindu, was found guilty today of the murder of Rheaan Singh on Jersey Island in the Sacramento River. September 16, 1919, in a quarrel over shares in a crop. As the verdict was murder in the first degree, without recommendation, hanging is the only penalty that may be inflicted.

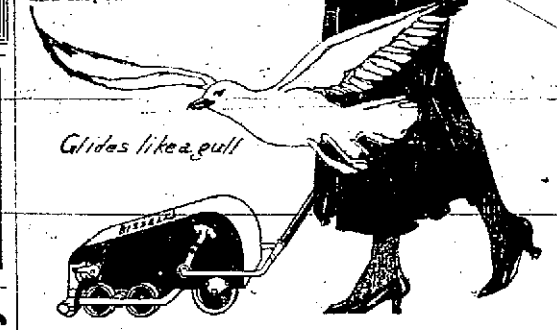

It is said to be the first death verdict in Contra Costa county since 1870. Four women were on the jury. The authorities assert they have evidence that Mather killed two other Hindus on the island the same night.

COUNCIL HEARS CAMP REPORT

Hope Permanent Site For Scouts Will Be Secured

Report was received by Scout Executive Henry L. Hopkins on the day Scout Camp held this summer at Lake Tahoe, when the executive committee of the Fresno council met in regular session yesterday noon at the Commercial Club. The camp was a success in every way, the scout executive stated, and while permanent location for summer camp is expected to be announced at the next meeting of the committee, the committee which has the location in report at the meeting yesterday.

For the 15 days of the camp, the cost was only $15 for each boy and this included transportation and board while in camp. Forty-eight boys attended and completed their training course, 15 others took several of the tests and returned on their road to second class scouts, and the nine who did not make the first grade, took many of the tests and were at the camp for the remainder of the tests and appeared before the court of honor.

There was no sickness in camp, Hopkins reported, aside from the usual stomach troubles and Mrs. H. L. Hopkins attended in the capacity of nurse. W. T. Johnson acted as leader with Hopkins.

C. B. Jackson reported that the questionnaires for use in giving examinations would be ready for distribution in a short time. It was also decided to take up with national headquarters the work of securing surplus army supplies for use by the troop. The local council has already taken up the problem of securing these goods and returned on their road to second class scouts, and the nine who did not make the first grade, took many of the tests and were at the camp for the remainder of the tests and appeared before the court of honor.

Present at the meeting yesterday were C. B. Jackson, John Hopkins, Sam G. Mitchell, (the Scoutmaster), J. H. Schell, James E. Cross, E. W. Johnson, George E. Sharp, C. H. Staples and Emil Gundelfinger.

Conley Successor

Causes Conference

Disqualification of Judge W. M. Conley of Maricopa, a presidential elector from the seventh district, on the ticket was the cause of a conference between Russell E. Conley, Democratic county chairman and leading candidate for governor, and the judges of the Maricopa district, on the legal ground that he could not hold two state offices, the Sacramento convention authorized its chairman, David E. Conley, of Maricopa, to call a conference in which the judges of the district might aid him in making his choice.

The names of several well known party workers were mentioned yesterday, but no recommendation resulted. Among those whose names were mentioned favorably were L. O. Stephens, Chris Jorgensen and Dr. L. Evers of this city; H. A. Jastrow and C. A. Barker of Hazelton; Charles King of Hanford, and Dr. Mary Ruth of Maricopa.

Political wisecracks yesterday were guessing that Stephens, who is in the east, would be named in case he would accept, but those in whose hands the recommendation rests declined to make any forecasts.

MANY ENTER IN RACE CARAVAN

Between 25 and 50 Autos to Go to Hanford Saturday

Returning to Fresno from a 12-day Hanford making arrangements for the automobile caravan which will go to attend the races at Hanford Saturday. E. F. Wheeler, district manager of the California State Automobile Association, reported yesterday that residents of the neighborhood were pleased with the caravan move and were planning a reception to the Fresno visitors.

Between 25 and 50 cars will make up the caravan, Wheeler stated yesterday. Up to last night 14 cars had registered at the office of the association, 1251 Broadway, to make the trip. Wheeler plans to have several of the drivers who are to compete at the Hanford races, to go on the trip and take the caravan, one of the drivers entering now, is going to compete in the first race. Drivers who desire to add their cars to the caravan are asked to register at the office of the association before the start which will be made at 12:30 o'clock Saturday. Wheeler said the route to Hanford are in good condition.

The caravan will be headed by a car containing L. A. Kurose, referee for the Hanford race, to be held there, with A. W. Richards and officials of the Prince Speedway Construction company and the Fresno County Chamber of Commerce.

Reservations for seats at the Hanford races will be handled through the office of the association here, Wheeler stated, and he urged all those who wish to join the caravan to register immediately.
